John E. O'Brien and Mr. J. P. Murphy were chosen managers.

Col. O'Brien proposed the following-named gentlemen for vice presidents, and they were elected:

Gen. Wm. F. Cullen, And J. Joyce, Wm. Fowley, Michael Talty, James McGranahan, P. G. Donaghue, E. Grogan, Dennis Murphy, Theo. Deacon, Jas. O'Meara.

Dr. Antwell, after returning his thanks for the kind words of welcome, said he would prove that it was in the District that this first meeting of Irishmen was convened to express their views. This was a genuine Irish meeting—not such an one as was held a few evenings ago, in which Major Haggerty himself could not find a genuine Irishman. The redress party for some time had been endeavoring to secure a meeting of the Irishmen of this district and the administration. If the radical party in Congress with that Ireland should go across, and that the neutrality laws should not be broken, why did they not pass an act redressing the neutrality law? It was never the intention of the radical party to have the English party in this country, or the English party to be allowed to retain them in another congressional term.

These are the men who say "President Johnson has deceived you;" "Come over to us." They stretch out one arm for the Irishmen, and the other for the English party in a sign of a double embrace. (Laughter.) We friend John will sacrifice themselves to the oppression of one part of our country by another, and above all they will support the wiles and patriotic course of President Johnson.

Col. O'Brien read the following resolutions, which were adopted:

WHEREAS desperate efforts are being made to alienate the fidelity and affection which the Irish citizens has ever entertained for the Constitution and Government of the United States, and through the detection of a few ambitious men of our race would seek to give color to the claims set up by a party which is not even represented in Congress; and whereas arrested on Anacostia Island Tuesday evening, 2d inst., for the purpose of inflicting a blow on the Union, and thereby creating a disturbance. Finest & costs by Justice Buckley.

DRUNK AND DISORDERLY.—Joshua Ellis (white) was arrested on Anacostia Island Tuesday evening, 2d inst., for the purpose of inflicting a blow on the Union, and thereby creating a disturbance. Finest & costs by Justice Buckley.

GARDEN HIRN BRIGHT.—John Scarrane, (colored), a youthful gallant, commenced to have a little innocent pleasure by whipping the child of Jane Carter, also colored. The child's mother came to its assistance, when Scarrane struck her a blow over the eye, knocking her down. Officer Dainger arrested him, and Justice Buckley fined him $2.50, which was paid by Mr. French, his employer.
